ADVERTISEMENTS.

Advertisements are inserted at the rate of $1,00 per square for first insertion, and for each subsequent insertion, 50 cents. A liberal discount made on yearly advertisements.

A space equal to ten lines of this type measures a square.

Business Notices set under a head, by themselves immediately after the local news, will be charged ten cents a line for each insertion.

Advertisements should be handed in before Monday noon to insure insertion in that week's paper.

ARTIFICIAL TEETH PERFECTED! — T. J. & H. J. CHANDLER have purchased the exclusive right of Beaver county to use Dr. Stuck's Patent Gum by which they can put up Vulcanite as thin as Gold Plate, with a beautiful enamelled polish; and so light and elastic as to perfectly adapt itself to the mouth; obviating all that clumsy and bulky condition, so much complained of heretofore, and lessening their liability to break 100 per cent. Indeed, no one seeing, it would be willing to wear the old style plate any longer than they could conveniently get them exchanged. All branches of Dentistry performed in the best and most substantial manner. In filling teeth with gold, etc., we challenge competition from any quarter, and can refer to living subjects whose fillings have stood between thirty and forty years. Among the number Hon. John Allison will exhibit fillings we inserted some 35 years ago; the teeth as perfect as the day they were filled. Laughing Gas prepared on a new plan, freeing it from all unpleasant and dangerous effects, making the extraction of teeth a source of pleasure rather than of horror and pain. Prices as low as any good dentist in the State. Office at Beaver Station, Rochester Pa. nov3:tf T. J. & H. J. CHANDLER.

SELECT POETRY.

Life and Adventures of an Insurance Agent.

'Twas a life-insurance agent, one of the modern style,
With blooming cheek, and finest toggery, and agreeable smile,
That persecuted Abner Brown, and woke inflamed his bile.

This agent followed Abner like a sleuth-hound on the scent,
And managed to encounter him wherever Abner went,
Till Abner simmered down into a state of discontent.

He used to corner Abner, and buttonhole him and bore,
Until, in desperation, the disgusted Abner swore
That the calmly-smiling agent would Abner bore no more.

In vain he strove that agent's visitations to avoid,
And he realized that, if he would no longer be annoyed,
That pestilential agent should speedily be destroyed.

One day he followed Abner to his place of business
Remarking, "Now, you'd better take a policy, I guess,"
Then Abner said one profane word, the opposite of "bless."

And held a loaded pistol 'midst the agent's bristling hair,
And grimly told that agent if he ever—anywhere—
Said policy to him again, he'd slay him, then and there!

"If that is so," the agent said, "perhaps I'd better go;
But, if you will permit me, I would just like to show
One new endowment policy, with rates extremely low."

His ill-timed iteration sealed the unwise agent's fate,
For Abner pulled the trigger and forever stopped his prate.
So that he annoyed nobody subsequent to that

The jurors by such agents had frequently been tried.
Hence their verdict was that Abner was completely justified
By "temporary insanity" in this one's homicide.

SELECT MISCELLANY.

BEHIND THE VEIL.

Mr. Edge was late at breakfast.—That was not an unusual occurrence; and he was disposed to be cross, that was likewise nothing new, so he retired behind the newspaper and devoured eggs and toast without vouchsafing any reply to the remarks of the fresh looking little woman opposite, to wit, Mrs. Edge. But she was gathering together her forces for the final onslaught, and when at length Mr. Edge had got down to the last paragraph, and laid aside the newspaper, it came.

"Dear, didn't you say you were going to have a hundred dollars for my new furs, to-day?"

"What furs?" (rather sharply was this spoken.) "Oh, pshaw! what is the use of being extravagant? I have no money to lay out in useless follies. The old ones are good enough for any sensible woman to wear."

Mrs. Edge—good, meek little soul that she was—relapsed into obedient silence. She only sighed a soft inward sigh, and presently began a new attack.

"Henry, will you go along with me to my aunt's to-night?"

"Can't you go alone?"

"Alone! how would it look?" Mrs. E.'s temper—for she had one, though it did not often parade itself—was aroused. "You are so neglectful of those little attentions you used to pay me once; you never walk with me, never pick up my handkerchief, nor notice my dress as you once did."

"Well, a fellow can't ever be waiting on a woman, can he?" growled Mr. Edge.

"You could be polite enough to Mrs. Waters last night, when you never even thought to ask whether I wanted anything, though you knew perfectly well that I had a headache I don't believe you care for me as much as you used to"—and Mrs. Edge looked extremely pretty with the tears in her blue eyes and the quiver in her round, rosy lips.

"Pshaw," said her husband, peevishly. "Now don't be silly, Maria."

"And in the stage yesterday, you never asked me if I was warm, or put my shawl around me, while Mr. Brown was so affectionate to his wife. It was mortifying enough, Henry, indeed it was."

"I didn't think women were such fools," said Mr. Edge, as he drew on his overcoat to escape the tempest which was fast approaching. "Am I the sort of a man to make a ninny of myself doing the polite to any sort of a female creature? Did you ever know me to be conscious whether a woman had on a shawl or a swallow-tailed coat?"

Maria eclipsed the blue eyes behind a little pocket-handkerchief and Henry, the savage, banged the door loud enough to give Betty a nervous start in the kitchen.

"Raining again! I do believe we are going to have a second edition of the deluge," said Mr. Edge to himself that evening as he ensconced his six feet of iniquity into the southwest corner of the car at City Hall. "Go ahead, conductor, can't you see that we are full, and it is almost dark already?"

"In one minute, sir," said the conductor, as he helped a little woman, with a basket, on board. "Now, sir, move up a little."

Mr. Edge was exceedingly comfortable, and did not want to move; but the light of a lamp falling on the pearly forehead and shining golden hair of the comer, he altered his mind and moved up.

"What lovely eyes," quoth he, mentally, as she bestowed a single acknowledging smile, "real violet, the very color I most admire! Bless me! what business have married men like me to be thinking about eyes? There, she has drawn a confounded veil over her face, and the light is as dim as a tallow dip; but those are pretty eyes."

The fair possessor of those blue eyes shivered slightly, and drew her mantilla close around her shoulders.

"Are you cold, Miss? Pray honor me by wearing my shawl. I do not need it myself."

She did not refuse—she murmured some faint apology for troubling him, but it was not a refusal.

"No trouble—not a bit," said he, arranging it on her tempting shoulders; and then as the young lady handed her fare to the conductor, he said to himself—"What a slender hand! If there is anything I admire in a woman, it is a pretty hand. Wonder what kind of a mouth she has got. It must be a delightful one if it corresponds with her hair and eyes—plague take the veil."

But "plague," whoever that mystic power may be, did not take possession of the veil, so Mr. Edge's curiosity about the blue-eyed damsel remained ungratified.

"Have you room enough, Miss? I fear you are crowded. Pray sit a little closer to me."

"Thank you, sir," was the soft reply coming from behind the veil—as Mr. Edge reflected—like an angel from a dark cloud. And his heart gave a large thump as the pretty shoulders touched his own shaggy overcoat in a hesitating manner.

"Decidedly, this is getting romantic," thought he, and then with an audible whisper, "What would Maria say?"

The rest of that long, dreary ride was delicious with the shoulder against his own. How gallantly he jumped up to pull the strap for her—by some streak it happened to be in the very street where he intended to stop. And under the circumstances we hardly blame him, when the cars stopped so suddenly that she caught at his arm, for the squeeze he gave the plump, rosy hand—any man of sense would have done the same—it was such an inviting little lily.

"Allow me to carry your basket, Miss, as our path lies in the same direction," said Mr. Edge, courteously relieving her of her burden as he spoke; "and—and—maybe you will find less difficulty if you should take my arm."

"Well, wasn't it delightful? Mr. Edge forgot the wet streets and the pitchy darkness—he thought he was walking on roses. Only as he approached his door he began to feel a little nervous, and wished the little incognito would not hold on so tight. Suppose Maria would be at the window, on the lookout, as she often was, how would she interpret matters? He couldn't make her believe that he only wanted to be polite to the fair traveler. Besides, his sweeping declaration in the morning—she would be sure to recall them. As he stopped at the right number and bade her adieu, he was astonished to see her run up the steps to enter. Gracious Apollo! He burst into a cold perspiration at the idea of the young lady's error.

"I think you must have made a mistake, Miss, this can not be your house."

But he was too late—she was already in the brilliantly lighted hall, and turning round threw off her dripping habiliments and made a low courtesy.

"Why, its my wife!" gasped Mr. Edge.

"And happy to see that you have [illegible] wards us ladies," pursued the merciless little puss, her blue eyes—they were pretty—all in a dance with suppressed roguery.

Mr. Edge looked from ceiling to floor in vain search for a loop-hole to retreat, but the search availed him nothing.

"Well," he said, in the most sheepish of tones, "it's the first time I was ever polite to a lady in the cars, and hang me if it shan't be the last."

"You see, my dear," said the ecstatic little lady, "I didn't expect to be delayed so long, and had not any idea I should meet with such attention in the cars, and that from my husband, too! Goodness gracious, how Aunt Priscilla will enjoy the joke!"

"If you tell that old harpy I will never hear the last of it," said Edge in desperation.

"Very probably," was the provoking reply of his wife.

"Now, look here, darling," said Mr. Edge, coaxingly, "you won't say anything, will you? A fellow don't want to be laughed at by the world. I say, Maria, you shall have the prettiest furs in New York if you will only keep quiet—you shall upon my honor.

The terms were satisfactory, and Maria capitulated—who wouldn't?—And this is the way she got those splendid furs that filled the hearts of all her female friends with envy. And perhaps it was what made Mr. Edge such a courteous husband ever since.

The Beaver Argus.

J. WEYAND, EDITOR AND PROPRIETOR.

Beaver, Pa., March 6th, 1872.

THE "Ring" newspapers of Pennsylvania take a peculiar sort of pride in attacking Governor Geary on all occasions; and yet they claim, all the while, to be the organs of the Republican party in this State; but let the anti-ring papers show up the corrupt practices of Senator's Cameron or State Treasurer Mackey, and they are forthwith "read out" of the Republican party. It makes a wonderful difference to these "ring organs" whose ox is gored.

A VIGOROUS effort has been made in Ohio for a few weeks past, by the anti-temperance men of that State, to have the present stringent license law repealed. A remonstrance against the proposed repeal was laid before the Assembly a few days ago signed by seven hundred and sixty-six convicts in the Penitentiary, all of whom ask that the law be left untouched. Four hundred and ninety-two of these seven hundred and sixty-six convicts declare in the petition that they were brought to the penitentiary by the use of intoxicating liquors, and all of them are convinced from bitter personal experience that it is "the great source of the crime, pauperism and suffering that prevail in the State." Comment would but weaken the tremendous argument.

THE remains of a woman, murdered, were found near Johnstown, Cambria county, on last Friday morning. A man named John Shriver first came across the body, and while away notifying others of what he saw, the murderer seems to have returned, and, gathering up some leaves and brush set fire to them with a view of burning up the corpse of his victim. The body was horribly mutilated by the fire, so disfigured in fact, that recognition was impossible. Intense excitement exists in that vicinity at the present time, but evidence sufficient to base an arrest upon, was not obtained up until last Monday. The general belief was that the woman's name was Amborlin, a lady aged about 35 or 40 years. Mrs. Amberlin was but slightly known in Johnstown, having come to that place recently from Ohio. Her intention was to open a millinery store in Johnstown within a few days. The tracks of a man leading from the scene of the murder were followed in the direction of a Mr. Moore's, and some suspicion rests upon himself and a step-son named Mark Connell, as the parties who committed the deed.

THE number of committees appointed by the Pennsylvania Legislature to inquire into the corrupt practices of "outsiders" are almost too numerous to keep the run of; in fact, taking Mr. Billingfelt's word for it there are hardly senators and members enough just now to fill them. While therefore, the committee business seems so popular would it be very much out of place for the people themselves to organize a few committees and send them to Harrisburg to investigate the money making habits of the Members of the Assembly? From what we hear lately we judge that it is every fellow for himself over there and the Devil for the commonwealth. Some of the members, it seems, can be bribed to leave Harrisburg on special occasions; others can be "persuaded" to forget that they were "paired," and generally speaking, "itching palms" can be grasped whenever they are sought. A little search into the business transactions of the members, might serve to show their constituents how it is that so many of the former who go to Harrisburg quite poor, make out, on a thousand dollar salary, to come home quite rich. The information would no doubt be useful to all concerned.

FOR three or four years past, the persons composing what is known as the "State Treasury Ring," have neglected no opportunity to attack Governor Geary. Knowing that he stood higher in the estimation of all honest men than themselves, they have persistently sought to blacken his character; and although professing to be Republicans, they did their very utmost to defeat him for Governor in 1869. Failing in that, they have since followed him like a pack of sleuth-hounds, and a couple of weeks ago, through, what looks very much like the subornation of a witness in the Evans case, sought to make it appear that the Governor had paid the editor of the Washington Chronicle a sum of money to help to put the Evans swindle through. Now, look "how plain a tale puts these 'treasury thieves' down," and how completely the testimony of one of the parties implicated, exonerates Governor Geary:

District of Columbia, County of Washington.

On this 23d of February, A. D. 1872, before me, the subscriber, a commissioner of Deeds of the State of Pennsylvania for the District of Columbia, personally appeared D. C. Forney, and, being duly sworn, declared that he is a citizen of the United States residing in said city, and the publisher of a newspaper. Deponent further says that he has read the testimony of Mr. Charles Wister before a committee of the Legislature of Pennsylvania, and that while it is substantially correct, as regards deponent's statement to him, he Mr. Wister, is mis-taken as to so much as ascribes any payment of money by the deponent to Gov. Geary, on account of any transactions deponent had with Mr. Geo. O. Evans; and, further, deponent never had any financial transactions with Gov. Geary relating to this matter, or any other matter, what ever. Deponent further says that he did receive $5,000 from Mr Geo. O. Evans, which was paid in diff rent installments. D. C. FORNEY.

Sworn to and subscribed before me this 23d day of February, A. D. 1872.

PIERCE ROOKE, Commissioner of Deeds.

ELSEWHERE in this week's ARGUS, will be found the details of a remarkable transaction, said to have occurred in the Legislature at Harrisburg, as long ago as the 19th of January. It comes to us at this late date from the New York Tribune, and it was not until it appeared in that paper last week that the least publicity was given to the affair by any of our own State's newspapers. This is a burning shame on Harrisburg Journalism, and suggests the idea that they are all, in some way or another, under the control or influence of the Legislature or the State officials. Look at the evidence that such a condition of things prevail there. The Tribune says: "On the 19th of January, Mr. Cooper (Rep.) came into the House of Representatives, toward the close of the morning hour, and endeavored to bring before that body a resolution of inquiry, but before the purport of his resolution appeared, a well known leader of the "Third House" hurriedly went upon the floor, and immediately, by a movement known to the initiated as the "Harrisburg flurry" the session was broken up rather than adjourned." Now does any sane person believe that all this could have occured in the House of Representatives on the 19th of January, and none of the Harrisburg newspapers, or the "brave" little army of correspondents who are domiciled there, know nothing about it? Impossible; and the presumption cannot be got rid of that the whole batch of them are either under pay of the Legislature or in the employ of State officials whose business transactions will not admit the shedding of a little light upon them.

Since the Tribune exposed the whole matter, some recognition of it had to be taken by the Legislature, and accordingly the subject was discussed in the Senate on last Thursday, and after the explosion of a good deal of virtuous indignation, it was referred to the committee having in charge the Evans investigation. The vote on investigation was 18 yeas, and 10 nays, Speaker Rutan voting with the latter. The charges, therefore, will be investigated—whether thoroughly or not remains to be seen—and we await with no little anxiety the result. In the meantime, we direct the attention of our readers to the article from the Tribune, above referred to, and ask them to study and reflect upon its specific allegations.

HERE AND THERE.

—A few weeks ago we chronicled the case of John Smith, of Summerville, Crawford Co., who married, was divorced and got married to another woman all in the space of a week. We have now the sequel in the fact that a brother of John's married the divorced wife, and that the parties are getting along satisfactorily. It takes Crawford county to do these things up in apple pie order.

—Col. Dan Rice, the great showman, has become entangled in financial difficulties which threaten to sweep away his possessions in Girard. Some of his creditors have had his property up for sale, and, as usual in such cases, the remaining creditors have been sending in their claims with fearful rapidity. The sale has been deferred for the present, and the hosts of friends of the Jolly Colonel will join with us in the hope that he may be able to arrange the difficulty in a satisfactory way.

—A remarkable diagram prepared by a Washington statistician, showed among other things, that only one-half as many children are now born to each one thousand women as in 1800, and that there has been a regular decrease from one decade of years to another. It seems that a similar state of things exists in other countries. According to John Stuart Mill there has been a steady decrease since 1821 in the number of children born to each one thousand women, both in France and England. It is especially noteworthy that this has been the case in England, where wealth has been accumulating so abundantly in both the middle and upper classes.

—A gang of burglars met with a singular mishap in Manchester, Ohio, a few nights since. Eleven in number they went at midnight to rob the First National Bank. Entering the building with a false key they proceeded to open the door of the safe with powder. While lighting the fuse a spark fell upon a keg of powder which they had brought, and an explosion of unexpected proportions speedily followed. Two men were killed outright, and another had a leg fearfully mangled. The others escaped, but all except two of them have since been captured. With one exception they were residents of the county, where for seven years they have been committing depredations.

—People say glibly that you cannot enforce liquor-laws; but this is one those matters in which you cannot tell till you try. They are trying to some purpose in Massachusetts, for there are not less than one hundred and thirteen persons now in the different Houses of Correction, serving out their sentences for illegal drumselling. The opponents of prohibition ought not to be sorry for this; for if it be in opposition to the opinion of a majority of the citizens, its rigid enforcement may result in a modification or repeal of the statute. If society thinks it unjust to imprison a man for selling a glass of grog, society has ample power to alter the law at the next election.

—There is a feminine genius in New York who ought no longer to remain unappreciated. In brief, she professes to have discovered how to make people live forever. The way you do it is to pour something into your ears, something into your eyes, and rub another something all over your head. All these somethings she is so very kind as to manufacture and sell in bottles, glass bottles, at highly remunerative prices. But these pourings and rubbings are not all. Your life must be that of an angelic abstraction, and you must on no account marry. To marry is to die, and pour and rub as you may, it shall not avail you. It is interesting to learn that a church is to be erected wherein this sybil's doctrines are to be preached, and her medicine piously administered.

—Sir Charles Dilke, the English Republican, even if he may not be called the English Democrat, set a good example to his country men the other day, not only by getting married, but also by getting married without any nuptial pomp and circumstances. He walked quietly to church from one quarter, and the lady from another. He made no long wedding tour, and was punctually in the House of commons on its opening night. As Sir Charles is a real English Baronet, with a title worth those of a hundred continental Counts, we wish that our aristocratic lovers, whose weddings are apt to be like the grand entry of a menagerie into a country town, could be induced to follow so respectable an example.

—There is no limit to the eccentricities of climate in New England, if that strange mixture of hot and cold, dry and wet, north-east wind and south-west wind, 90° in the shade and 5° in the sun, can properly be called a climate at all. What do our readers think of Cornish, Me.? That hamlet, during a recent severe snowstorm, and while the feathery element was coming down in all its fury, was astonished by three distinct and well defined claps of thunder, with flashes of lightning to match! The general opinion in Cornish was that an earthquake might be expected to arrive immediately, or a hurricane, perhaps, or a water-spout. A kind Providence, however, stayed its hand; the skies cleared up, and the joys of excellent sleighing assuaged the terror of the Cornish men and Cornish women.

Forty-Second Congress.

SECOND SESSION.

SENATE, Feb. 26.—A bill was introduced providing that persons held as prisoners of war or in hospital at the time or subsequent to the issuing of their commissions shall have the same pay and emoluments as if mustered at that date. A bill for removing political disabilities was also introduced. Mr. Conkling offered a resolution calling for information as to how many persons the Senators from Missouri, New York, Illinois and Nebraska had recommended for appointment to office, it was aimed at Messrs Schurz and Trumbull, and elicited sharp words between Morton, Conkling, Trumbull, &c.; it went over without definite action. The resolution relative to sales of arms was then debated till the hour of adjournment.

HOUSE.—A large number of bills for the removal of political disabilities were passed. A bill to repeal the law requiring canned fruits, sauces, mustards, jellies, vegetables, meats, &c. to be stamped, was passed. A resolution instructing the committee on expenditures in the war Department to inquire into the sale of ordnance stores during the late French war, with power to send for persons and papers, was adopted. A bill was passed to extend the time for the completion of the Portage Lake and Lake Superior ship canal to the 3d of March 1873. The deficiency bill was then considered in committee of the Whole until the hour of adjournment.

SENATE, Feb. 27.—The bill for the relief of the Chicago Postmaster was passed; so was the one authorizing the free importation of photographs, paintings, scenery, and statuary for the Cleveland Exhibition. Mr. Conkling's resolution relative to the number of recommendations for office made by Senator's Trumbull and Schurz went over for the present. The sales of arms resolution was then discussed until the hour of adjournment.

HOUSE.—Petitions from Pensylvania miners were presented against a reduction of the Tariff on coal and iron. The bill for retiring mutilated bank notes was made the special order for the first Tuesday in April. The Senate amendment to the House bill authorizing the construction of a bridge across the Missouri river at St. Joseph, was concurred in. A committee of conference was ordered on the Senate amendment to the House bill allowing the transportation of goods in bond. The Senate bill extending the time for the completion of the Green Bay canal, and the surgeon Bay and Lake Michigan ship canal, passed. So did the Senate bill setting apart the Yellowstone Valley for a Public Park. The deficiency bill was discussed till the hour of adjournment.

SENATE, Feb. 28.—There was nothing of interest, except the discussion of the French arms resolution; nor did they finish that discussion. The House passed a resolution to investigate the matter, several days ago without debate. It would have been the part of wisdom, if the Senate had acted similarly.

HOUSE.—A resolution from the Legislature of the State of Maine, praying for relief in the Fishery difficulties, was presented. The House proceeded to business on the Speaker's table, and disposed thereof as follows; The Senate amendments to the House bill for the admission free of duty of photographs intended for exhibition. The amendments include paintings and statuary imported for the exhibition at any port within six months. Concurred in. The Senate bill for the relief of certain counties in Iowa. Passed with an amendment. The Senate bill to reimburse United States Soldiers for the loss of clothing by the Chicago fire. Passed. The Senate bill to extend time to the State of Wisconsin to complete a road from Fond du Lac to Lake Superior was opposed by Mr. Holman as making eventually a new grant of land of 2,000,000 acres, the old grant having expired three or four years ago. Pending the consideration of which the House adjourned.

SENATE, Feb. 29.—The bill exempting canned fruits, fish, meats, preserves, jellies, &c., from internal revenue tax, passed. The Judiciary committee reported adversely to the bill allowing criminals to testify in their own behalf. A bill was reported to protect purchasers of lands sold for non-payment of taxes in the late insurrectionary States. The bill to permit six Japanese students to be educated at West Point Military Academy passed. The French arms debate terminated in the adoption of an amendment directing the committee to inquire whether any American Senator or citizen has been in unauthorized communication or collusion with the agents of any foreign power; and as thus amended a committee of investigation was ordered. The preamble was laid on the table.

HOUSE.—The House spent the entire day discussing the bill extending the time for the completion of the Lake St. Croix and Lake Superior Railroad, and granting public land subsidies; no definite action was had.

SENATE, March 1.—Nothing of public interest transpired.

HOUSE.—The Senate amendment to the bill, removing the stamp duty on canned fruits, &c., was concurred in and the bill goes to the President. A bill was passed for a more effective system of quarantine. The House then went into committee of the whole on the deficiency bill, and soon after adjourned.

Robbing the Mails.

For some months past the little village of Belvidere, on the Western division of the Erie Railway, has been the scene of several mail robberies, and the United States authorities have finally traced the perpetration of the crime to Harry W. Bullock, the postmaster at that place, and he was arrested on Saturday. The evidence against the accused appears to be conclusive, and he has been suspected of tampering with the mails for a year past. His plan of operation has been as follows: The train that leaves the mail at Belvidere does not stop, and the bag is thrown off, generally at night. It would then be taken, rifled and hidden away. The last time a bag disappeared was in the early part of the present month. It had been placed on the crane by the agent on No. 12, which was late that night, and was taken off, and next morning the Postmaster reported to inquirers after mail matter that none had arrived. The bag contained a number of registered letters and $5,000 in bonds, and a few days afterward the latter were found secreted under a fence about half a mile west of a station, and near by was a number of registered letter envelopes which had been rifled of their contents. This being the third or fourth time the bag had disappeared in a similar manner, the Special Agent determined to discover the robber of robbers. Strongly suspecting Postmaster Bullock, he decided to bait him with decoy registered letters. Several of these, at different times, were sent addressed to certain persons at Belvidere, who were posted in the matter, the letters being mailed on the train just before it reached the station. None of these letters ever reached the parties to whom they were addressed, the Postmaster assuring them that no such letters had ever been received at the Belvidere office. This decided the Agent, and he at once made a charge against Bullock of robbing the United States mail, and he was arrested as stated. He was very much surprised when the arrest was made, and declared his innocence of the charge. He waived an examination before United States Commissioner Wood, and gave bonds for his appearance at the next term of the United States Court at Utica for trial.

PENNSYLVANIA.

The Specific Offenses Charged Against the Auditor-General and the State Treasurer—Speculating in the Funds of the Commonwealth.

HARRISBURG, Feb. 27.—On the 19th of January, Mr. Cooper came into the House of Representatives toward the close of the morning hour, and endeavored to bring before that body a resolution of inquiry, but before the purport of his resolution appeared a well-known leader of the "Third House" hurriedly went upon the floor and immediately, by a movement known to the initiated as the "Harrisburg flurry," the session was broken up rather than adjourned. The resolution never was offered again, the matter, probably, having been "fixed;" but, as the movement above described is only resorted to in case of emergency, a considerable inquiry was excited as to the objects aimed at. Events subsequently placed a copy of the resolution in your correspondent's hands, but though the allegations were important and specific, no authority was cited, and your correspondent awaited further developments. During the last ten days, the two officers mentioned in the resolution, have been interesting themselves to procure the pardon of a certain young lawyer of Philadelphia, lately condemned for being connected with frauds on the Treasury of that city. Attention being attracted to the case, an investigation ensued, which seems to establish the propriety of making public the suppressed resolution. The portion relevant reads as follows:

Whereas, John B. Hartranft, Auditor-General, and Robert W. Mackey, State Treasurer, have been accused of illegally using moneys of the Commonwealth, in applying the same in carrying on various operations in stocks, to the extent, of several millions of dollars, and to the payment of their private debts; and

Whereas, The said State officers are further accused of having used the moneys of the Commonwealth in the purchase of the loans of the Commonwealth for their own benefit, particularly to the purchase of $189,500 of the 5 per cent. loan of the Commonwealth, and $31,050 of the six per cent. loan of the Commonwealth; and of having sold the said loans to the Sinking Fund of the Commonwealth at an advantage or profit to the said Mackey of $2,943.42, and of an advantage to the said Hantranft of $2,700; and

Whereas, The said Mackey is further accused of having received, among other sums, the following payments as interest on the moneys of the Commonwealth loaned or deposited by him for or on account of such consideration, viz.: On August 25, 1869, $677.50; on February 9, 1870, $3,320.50; on May 16, 1870, $317.50; and October 5, 1871, $5,000. Therefore, be it

Resolved, (the Senate concurring) That a Joint Committee of the Senate and House of Representatives be appointed to inquire into the accusations aforesaid, and report, with authority to send for persons and papers.

Mr. R. W. Mackey has just been re-elected State Treasurer, and Mr. J. F. Hartranft is the expectant candidate for the Governor's chair. The Legislature reconvenes to-morrow, 28th, but owing to the sitting in Philadelphia of three committees, and also to the prevailing sickness, it is hardly probable a quorum will assemble on the first day. Gov. Geary, who has been quite ill for several weeks, is recovering and expected to be in Philadelphia to-day, but his physicians decided against his going.

—A few days after the above appeared in the Tribune, the matter was brought up in the State Senate and an attempt made to "kick the case out of court," whereupon the Tribune's correspondent refers to it again as follows:

"Virtuous indignation is the buffer put out to break the force of the exposure in THE TRIBUNE of the 28th inst. It was first proposed to bring up the resolution of inquiry referred to, and go through the form of having it disposed of by the House, but for certain reasons, this was not adopted. Messrs. Hartranft, Mackey &Co., the accused, take refuge in general denial and wrathful imputation of motives. The publication of the resolution is declared to be an attack on the friends of the Administration in this State, an effusion of personal spite, &c.—Now the significant point of the resolution is its summary suppression.—If the act is denied distinctly, as it has been by implication, your correspondent will "name names."—Saw-dust beating the air is waste of force which Messrs. H., M. & Co. will yet need. If they want to plead denial, let them deny the records which correspond exactly with the figures set forth in the resolution.—They shall have full opportunity, attention being confined at this time to items they have protested against as "the inventions of wilfull malice."—Mr. Hartranft shall have the first chance—his political prospects being at stake. Did Mr. H. at sundry times previous to April, 1870, purchase on joint account with Mackey, sundry loans of the commonwealth—he being at the time State Auditor and Mackey being State Treasurer?—Did he arrange with Mackey to use the funds of the State Treasury in making these purchases? Were not these securities sold by Hartranft and Mackey to the Sinking Fund of the commonwealth, on the 29th day of April, 1870? and did not John F. Hartranft, State Auditor and candidate for Governor, receive $2,700 on the 10th day of December, 1870 as his share of the profits of that operation?

The Legislature has not thought fit to make this inquiry, and yet Mr. H., as a candidate, ought to desire, since one question has arisen, it should be made definite, that he may make definite reply. He may turn his attention to that unfortunate "Oil Creek" business, which in his own graphic language, "took the starch." This transaction, and Mr. Mackey's affairs will be dealt with hereafter.

☞ The snow which blocked the Union Pacific Railroad is described as a peculiar kind of snow. It would pack and soon become hard as ice. The snow plows, driven up against it with the United force of four locomotives, would hardly make an impression. The only way to get it out was to dig trenches every six feet down to the rails, and then use the snow plows. But this was not always successful. At one time three engines were thrown from the track and the snow plow mashed trying to get through, when to the eye it seemed that one engine could go through without difficulty. At some points says a letter writer, I have seen the snow so hard that the engines would leave the rails and run right up upon it, mounting it as though it was a flint rock. You would not believe that, unless you could see it, but it is true. I did not believe it till I saw it, for it seems incredible.

Universal Postal Congress.

It is probable that the proposed universal postal congress will be held very shortly, all parties applied to having signified their intention to attend. The German proposals are to include all Europe and the Russian and Turkish possessions in Asia, Egypt, Algeria, Spanish North Africa, the Canaries and Madeira, Greenland, the United States and British North America into one large system. Within the limits of this system letters are to be forwarded at one fixed rate, whatever the distance, allowing only for two classes in respect of weight, viz, letters under and over fifty grammes. The former are to be uniformly charged twenty centimes, the latter forty centimes. Only when carried by sea a greater distance than three hundred knots an additional sea postage of twenty centimes is to be admissible. Registered letters shall be charged twenty centimes extra. Newspapers, bookpost, etc., are to be conveyed at the rate of ten centimes per forty grammes. The postage is to be paid by the sender affixed in stamps of his country, the proceeds going exclusively to that country. No transit postage is henceforth to be levied. No exemptions for postage are to be allowed.

THE "TWO WITNESSES."

OF REV. XI, 3.

MR. EDITOR.—Your correspondent, Wyndotte, informs us that, there is a gentleman residing near Hazel Dell who has for many years been inquiring who are these two witnesses; what a pity he did not make his wants known to the readers of the ARGUS before this. Your friend, Homo, would have been glad to have relieved his mind on this all important subject. The "two witnesses" brought to view in Rev. xi, 3, which reads as follows: "And I will give power unto my two witnesses, and they shall prophesy a thousand two hundred and threescore days, clothed in sackcloth." In the first place, let it be remembered that we are dealing with symbols. Some have the idea that these two witnesses are literal, which is absurd; when followed out in all its consequences. Some think they are Enoch and Elijah; but we will notice briefly the results of such a theory. These witnesses are said to be "the two olive trees and the two candlesticks standing before the God of the earth." Why not contend that they are literally "two olive trees," or "candlesticks?" We have as good reason to suppose them to be literal olive trees and candlesticks as men. Again, to suppose that the "two witnesses," of Jesus Christ, in the person of two men, are yet to traverse earth's surface, belching forth literal fire from their mouths and destroying their enemies, which these witnesses are said to do (see verse 5), is an idea unworthy of being entertained. Again, it is said that after they have finished their testimony in sackcloth, they are to be killed by a "beast out of the bottomless pit," which beast must be literal, providing the witnesses are such. We will not do violence to symbolic prophesy which those do who make these witnesses literal, and yet admit that the "holy city" is symbolic of the true church. A witness is one who gives testimony; testimony is of two kinds—verbal and written. The latter kind is frequently the strongest. For instance, you may produce twenty persons, in court, to prove my indebtedness to you; but if I can produce a receipt, in your hand-writing, with your signature annexed for the alleged sum, your twenty witnesses flies before it, and their entire testimony is outweighed by this one witness. The "two witnesses" as we have seen are not literal, their testimony cannot be verbal; and, therefore, must be written. We think that our Hazel Dell gentleman cannot doubt that the Old Testament, containing the inspired testimony of the Father concerning his Son, is the first witness. The second witness is the "works" of Christ. But where is the accounts of those works? He is not now among us performing miracles in proof of his Messiahship. The "New Testament" writings contain the whole written account of those works, and, therefore, become the second witness. The Old Testament witnessed of Christ's birth, generation, and time of his first advent, as also his humiliation. The New Testament witnesses to the truth of all that holy men foretold, gives us an account of his ministry, his wondrous works, his death, resurrection and ascension; gives us the signs that were to precede his second advent, as also a more perfect understanding of prophetic time connected with that event, and points to that time for the full realization of the glory for which he suffered. Its words will witness for or against us in the day of judgment.

Having now determined the two testaments to be the "two witnesses," we shall notice in our next what is meant by "prophesying in sackcloth," hoping that our Catholic friends will keep cool during the investigation is the sincere desire of your friend.

HOMO.

P. S. There will be preaching at Vanport School House, Sunday March 10 inst., at 10 a. m., 2½ p. m., and 6 evening. Subject: "Thief on the Cross," morning; "Paul's Desire to Depart," afternoon. Liberty will be given after each sermon, for questions pertaining to the subject. All are invited.

SHAKEN TO THE CENTRE.

The Oil Regions Still immensely Agitated Over the Great Combination—The Titusville Papers Red Hot on the Subject—What they Have to Say—A New Outlet Proposed, &c.

The prevailing sensations in the petroleum fields is the South improvement Company, its organization, aims and a foreshadowing of the results that will probably ensue to the producers and refiners from its operation. The Titusville papers of yesterday, received in this city last night, are fairly full to the brim with all sorts of appeals on the subject—most of them couched in the warmest style, all deprecating the pass to which things have come at last, and a few of the more thoughtful suggesting means whereby the great railroad combination may be checkmated: Under the heading "Ho! For Oil City," the people were recommended to turn en masse for the purpose of attending the meeting there yesterday, and to other respects the papers afford evidence of the increasing excitement. Here is how the Courier pays its compliments to the South Improvement Company: There are times when the rights of communities are imperilled, by a few men conspiring for wealth, or political power. To-day the oil region is menaced by the which seeks by unholy means to appropriate to itself the wonderful resources to which the inhabitants, by purchase, enterprise and industry, possess an indefeasible title. Are there any claims in the world which the South Improvement company can lay to the wealth of this region? Has the company ever taken risks either in the purchase or in the development of oil territory? Have its members ever exchanged the comforts of a home in a city, or in old towns where scarcely less privileges exist, for a life in cabins among barren hills, amid greasy derricks, hazarding every dollar which they possessed in searching for oil hundreds of feet below the ground? Is it to be wondered at that the men of the oil region are rising in their might to defend the heritage of their toil against the grasp of a ruthless conspiracy? Does the Pennsylvania Legislature dare refuse to the people of this section relief from a law compelling them to pay tribute to, and be subject to the power of a pipe monopoly?

The Herald is more practical, though scarcely calmer, and agitates a project of a new and independent route to the seaboard, by which we "may now hugging us in its fatal embrace." It assumes that the present trunk lines running eastward are all owned and controlled by Eastern capitalists, who are neither producers or refiners, but whose sole interest is to extract the highest possible price for transporting petroleum, and argues rather singularly that the South Improvement Company may, after all, be a blessing in disguise, through its operation in stirring up the people to a sense of their situation. It says must traverse the heart of the oil districts. "It must not stop at our city, but be extended south through Oil City and Franklin to Bear Creek. It must stretch through the orchards, pastures, grain fields, and vineyards and splendid agriculture of Western New York, and terminate at the great city of Buffalo, which enjoys so pre-eminent a commercial position, second to no interior city on the continent; a city which unlocks the gates of canal, lake and river, and commands so many diverse and competing lines of railroad to the seaboard, Montreal, Portland, Boston and New York. Such a route would establish and forever seal and maintain the commercial independence and industrial prosperity of this region, build up all our cities, and aggrandize the petroleum interest to magnificent proportions. We already have a railroad projected to Erie, and but that road does not and cannot meet the emergency fully. Our friends down the river are only in a measure benefited by the Erie road and outlet. In Erie we have eight months of navigation. At Buffalo we have twelve months in the year for shipment. The product of crude in four months is 1,920,000 barrels, which, valued at $4 per barrel, amounts to $7,680,000. Can the oil region and interest afford, no matter what the stage of market, to store this amount of oil, with its immense shrinkage by evaporation and leakage, risk by fire and fluctuation in price, for a period of one third of a year? Money breeds money, and must not stagnate. The proposition bears its own refutation on its face."

THE PROPOSED NEW OUTLET

WE HAIL IT AS A BLESSING,

THE PRESIDENCY.

The Labor Candidates.

The two gentlemen nominated by the Columbus Labor Convention are in the main well known. Governor Parker has served in the Executive chair of New Jersey, and is a Democrat of the more intelligent and anti-Bourbon school. It is confidentially announced that he will accept the nomination offered in a forthcoming speech, to be delivered at a ratification meeting in Trenton.

Judge David Davis of the United States Supreme Court is an old friend of the late President Lincoln, by whom he was nominated to the Supreme Court. He was born in Cecil County, Md., on March 9, 1815; graduated at Kenyon College, Ohio, in 1832, and subsequently studied law in Massachusetts and, also, at the Law School in New Haven, Conn. Removing to Illinois in 1835, he was admitted to the bar, and soon after settled in Bloomington in the practice of his profession. In 1844 he was elected to the State Legislature, in 1847 he served as a member of the State Constitutional Convention of that year, and in 1848 was elected Judge of the VIIIth Judicial District of the State. In 1855, and again in 1861 he was reelected to this position. He had been a long and intimate friend of Mr. Lincoln, and as a delegate to the Chicago Convention of 1860 had a large share in securing his nomination for the Presidency. The two had been thrown much together by the practice of their profession in a thinly populated country, and the intimacy between them was of the closest and most confidential character. In his third term as circuit-Judge in Illinois he was, in 1862, appointed by Mr. Lincoln to the position of Associate Judge of the Supreme Court of the United States. Mr. Lincoln also appointed him executor, and the estate of the murdered President was wound up by Judge Davis. There has been considerable talk of his being an available candidate for the Presidency on the Democratic ticket for a year or two, although the Judge has been known as a pronounced Republican. His course on the legal tender cases however—he voted with the majority in May of last year, holding the legal tender act to be constitutional—has served to estrange him from the Democracy. He has also frequently been mentioned during the past few days as the probable candidate who would receive the support of the "passive policy" Democrats against General Grant. Judge Davis is a man of large fortune, and personally is above reproach.

☞ The Evans case, which left an unsavory odor on the last legislature of Pensylvania, seems not entirely without interest again. The new light thrown upon the action of the State officials in our correspondence, to-day, will perhaps remind the law-makers of that State that there are other objects in political life than "regular indorsements" and impunity in the party ranks. Charges of a grave nature are openly made against Gen. Hartranft, and if, as we understand, that gentleman thinks himself the right man for the next Governor, we apprehend the people will demur, unless it is satisfactorily shown that his hands are clean.—New York Tribune March 1st.

☞ "General" Harry White is a republican in the Pennsylvania senate whom the journals of that State perversely poke fun at, as much as is of a statesman and a soldier than he esteems himself. Senator Harry is desirous of becoming governor, and to compass that very laudable desire he has done several things which the sharp eyes and sharper tongue of the press have exposed to public derision. The amiable Harry objected to the hearing of Colonel M'Clure's case, and did his best to stifle the petition for an investigation. This has drawn on the wrath of the reformers upon the eager candidate, and somewhat impaired his already meagre chances.—N. Y. Tribune.

☞ AN Atlanta, (Georgia), correspondent tells this story: "The woman's rights act, giving the wife a cause of action against a party selling liquor or anything else to her husband while drunk, and allowing the proceeds of the fine to go to the wife, was passed. The most noticeable comment evoked by the passage of the bill came from Whit Anderson, a courteous and popular messenger of the Senate. "Now," said Whit, "I can afford to get married, for my wife can easily support the family on fines I will bring her."

About the "Black Dutch" Article.—A gentleman of this place received the following note on last Monday morning from O. P. Wharton Esq., which we are requested to publish:

BEAVER, PA., March 4th, 1872.

DEAR SIR:—I hear that Mr. Jo. Anderson told you that the "Black Dutch" article was written by me as a communication, and never appeared in the Radical as an editorial. This is a lie in all its parts, and told by a born liar. The article was written by Rev. A. B. Bradford, as a communication, and was inserted as an editorial by Quay's order. Rev. A. B. Bradford is too much of a man to tell a lie, and will not deny this, if you inquire of him.

Very respectfully,

O. P. WHARTON.

Speaker Rutan and the Ladies.—Miss Hindman the leader of the female Suffragists of Allegheny county, went to Harrisburgh a couple of weeks ago to present petitions urging the granting of the admission of women as delegates to the convention for the modification of the State Constitution. On her return she appeared before a public audience and said: She was more than ever convinced, since her visit to the capital, that women should be lawgivers for themselves. Women had some good friends in the Legislature—women might trust, Mr. Anderson, of this county, and Speaker Rutan—the names of others she was not at liberty to give. In the House women had other good friends in Mr. Gilfillan, Mr. Mickey of Washington county, and Mr Hancock, of Philadelphia.

TO LET—A GOOD HOUSE in Beaver, with seven rooms, on the bank of the Ohio. Inquire of S. J. Boyd.

Dr. White Feather, of the Shawnee tribe of Indians, lectured in the M. E. church of this place on last Thursday evening. The principal portion of his lecture was confined to the customs, habits, &c., of the Indian race. We were not present to hear it, but understand that it was highly amusing. He had a good audience. The proceeds, over and above the lecturer's fee, went to the Ladies' Working Society. Personally, we do not take much stock in Indian performances. The war-whoop is heard too long on our streets after the braves have departed. Nearly all of our little tads immediately become Shawnee, Seminole or Kickapoo warriors and the airings with their unearthly shrieks from morning until late bedtime, for months afterwards. A little Indian now and then would not come amiss, but a large amount of the article is an absolute bore. So say you all.

Generous Contributions.—On last Sabbath it was announced in the M. E. congregation of Bridgewater, that a deficiency existed in the pastor's salary for the year, amounting to $300. This was owing to the fact that quite a number of the members of the society had removed to other localities during the year. On the day referred to, however, steps were taken to raise the amount necessary to adjust the claim; and while the members themselves contributed liberally, no little praise was awarded by the congregation to Capt. J. V. McDonald, Dr. A. T. Shallenberger and Mr. B. S. Ranger—gentlemen who are not connected with the society—for their liberal contributions on the occasion; Capt. McDonald alone giving one hundred and fifty dollars. The whole deficiency was raised in a very quiet way, and in the course of a few minutes. We make mention of this circumstance with no little degree of pleasure, for but few ministers are more devoted to their calling than the pastor here referred to, (Rev. —— Hollingshead,).

Editorial Notice.—The reader's attention is called to D. Appleton & Co's advertisement in another column, of a new edition of the leading novels of Fenimore Cooper, designed specially for popular circulation. The first of the series will be "The last of the Mohicans," which will appear with numerous new illustrations by F. O. C. Darley. The style of publication will be the popular octavo form, with paper covers, the purpose being to render the novels as low as possible. Heretofore there has been no edition of this acknowledged head of American romancists suitable for general popular circulation, and hence the new issue of these famous novels will be welcomed by the generations of readers [illegible] sprung up since Cooper departed from us. As time progresses, the character, genius and value of the Cooper romances become more widely recognized; he is now accepted as the great classic of our American literature, and his books as the prose epics of our early history.

Ladies' Spring Fashions.—We are to have charming costumes in linen, percale and other spring materials by and by, which are already garnished with bleached and unbleached lace and fringes. Berlin sends us these. Then there is another soft, all-wool fabric, exceedingly pretty withal, of French cretonn, perfectly plain, solid color. It acts as body-guard to the figured chintzes. For instance, if the former, make the underskirt, vest, under sleeves; it is double width and 80 to 90 cents a yard. About nine yards will be required—or eight—according to one's size and ideas about the flouncing thereof Of the figured cretonnh to wear over this must the Dolly Varden be made, or a plain overskirt and shaped in order to disclose the vest. It may be added that in this season's goodsan innovation is made, and bouquets of flowers are not altogether the rule as arabesques in every species of geometrical design are found in very bright tints on a plain ground of black or neutral shade

Pretty new cambrics are visible, suggestive of brenkfast-tables upon which lie early salads, with a primrose for the buttonhole and young green vines peeping in at open windows. They lie tantalus-like upon counters as yet in snowy grounds on which blush tiny buds in pink and blue and faint violet. There are others in stiffer styles of the invariable right-angles, squares, and line stripes in black, which will do for a Mrs. Gradgrind, but never for enchanting Dolly Varden.

Mr. Robert McCreery of this place, but who has been engaged in business in the West for several years past, died at the residence of his son-in-law, Wm. K. Boden, esq., at Oqwanka, Illinois, on the 27th of February. His remains reached Beaver on last Saturday morning in charge of Mr. Boden, and the funeral took place on the afternoon of the following Sabbath. Mr. McCreery was about 68 years of age, and for many years transacted business as a merchant in Beaver.

Capturing Greenhorns.—We have recently heard of several laughable instances of persons in this county being captured by the counterfeit money dodge. The way it is made to work is something like the following: Mr. Greenhorn receives a "confidential" circular from a New York shaver, in which he is informed that for $100 in good money $10 of which is to be sent with the order, and the remaining $90 to be paid on delivery, he will send him by express (C. O. D.) a box containing $2,000 of counterfeit money, so well executed that not one banker out of ten can distinguish it from the genuine article. Visions of ease, pleasure and luxury at once begin to float through Greenhorn's brain, and he writes his order, encloses his $10 and sends it by mail to his "friend" in New York. He soon after begins to visit the express office, inquiring about a small box he is expecting, and if told it is not there, he walks away despondingly; in fact he is said to look as if hope deferred was making his heart sick. His visits, however, to the express office are continued from day to day, until at last the box comes. He feels good now. He pays the $90, takes his treasure carefully home, opens it, and finds, not a fortune in embryo, but a lot of sawdust, and nothing else in it. He realizes for the first time that his "friend" in New York, is not just the man he ought to be; and that he is short just one hundred dollars is as perceptible to him now as the nasal organ on his neighbor's face. Some of the bitten ones, overcome with their loss, publish their own infamy, by detailing the whole transaction, and then wonder why they are without the sympathy of the public in their "misfortune." They do not seem to comprehend that they sought to, and that it was through no fault of their own, that they failed to become as arrant scoundrels as the New York sharper himself. Others of them bite their lips, keep quiet, and if their attempts to become dishonest gets to the ears of the public, it usually leaks out from something that was seen or said at the Express office where the saw-dust package put in an appearance.

Capt Jesse Dean, of Rochester this county, died on the 27th inst., after a short illness. The deceased was well known to all of our river men. The Pittsburgh Gazette of last Thursday contains the following touching the life of Capt. Dean, which will be read with interest by all who know him:

Elsewhere we announce the death of Capt. Jesse Dean, who was born at Lisbon, Ohio, 52 years ago, went on the Ohio river in 1836, at the age of 16, with his brother Wm. Dean, then commanding the steamer Hunter; afterwards on the Boston and Tuscarora (first one of that name.) Capt. Jesse Dean piloted the Majestic, Amaranth, New England No. 2, Messenger No. 2, and others of the famous Cincinnati and Pittsburgh packet line. Later he piloted the Clara Dean, in the Louisville trade, and subsequent to that commanded the St. Louis. He left the river in 1859, and tried farming in Illinois, but not finding it congenial to his tastes, he returned to the river in 1863 and took command of the packet Carmella. Since that time he commanded the present Messenger, running between Cincinnati and New Orleans. He retired finally from the river business in 1870, since which time he has been residing at Rochester, Beaver County, Pa., where he died Tuesday, 27th inst. Capt. Dean leaves four children, three sons and a daughter, and a large circle of friends to mourn his loss.

Thus passes away another of our old, respected and successful steamboatmen, who leaves behind him, however, the best heritage for his children. He was one of the old stock of boatmen, which is now becoming smaller with each year, and will soon be entirely gathered to their last resting places. Capt Jesse Dean was well known throughout the whole western and southern country, as none were more active and stirring midst the busy scenes on the Ohio and Mississippi during the past thirty five years. The flags of our steamers were yesterday draped in mourning and placed at half mast in honor of the memory of the deceased. He was one of a family of four brothers —all steamboatmen—viz: Captains William, Alexander, Samuel and Jesse. Farewell, old friend.

Ladies, Keep Your Eyes Open! "MY TWO WITNESSES."

MR. EDITOR:—Some gentleman, residing near Hazel Dell, is inquiring about the two witnesses spoken of in Rev. xi. 32. Dr. Adam Clark, L. L. D., &c., says "that passage is extremely obscure. The conjectures of interpreters are as unsatisfactory as they are endless. Those who wish to be amused or bewildered may have recourse both to ancients and moderns on this subject;" and there he leaves it. But, who and what are these witnesses? Burkett, in his commentaries, answers, "The whole succession of faithful ministers, martyrs and confessors, which Almighty God from time to time has raised up in his church to be the asserters and maintainers of Divine truth, and to bear their testimony for Christ against all heresies, blasphemies, idolatries and usurpations in the time of Antichrist's reign," &c. In a critical and explanatory Pocket-Bible before me, by Rev. A. R. Fausset, A. M., the reference is: Zech. iv. 3, 12, where two individuals are meant—Joshua and Zerubbabel—who ministered to the Jewish Church, just as the two olive trees emptied the oil, &c.; so the Apostasy God will raise up two inspired witnesses to minister encouragement to the afflicted though sealed remnant. I think the twofold church—Jewish and Gentile—may be meant. Many of the early church thought the "two witnesses to be Enoch and Elijah," &c. Wordsworth's view was, "They are the two Testaments ministering their testimony to the church of the old dispensation as well as to that of the new; but Primasius K. proves that primarily the two Testaments can not be meant; for these shall never be "killed," &c.

Another says, "The two witnesses are God's two olive trees and two candlesticks, because they are the repositories of His grace and the lights which He has appointed to shine in this dark world."

Thus we find Dr. Clark's opinion as to the character of this point, appears sustained. He says he had resolved for a considerable time, not to meddle with this book, "because I foresaw that I could produce nothing satisfactory on it; but, I changed my resolution, and have added short notes where I thought I understood the meaning." "Shall I have the reader's pardon, if I say that it is my firm opinion that the expositions of this Book have done great disservice to religion; almost every commentator has become a prophet; for, as soon as he began to explain he began, also, to prophesy, and what has been the issue? Disappointment laughed at hope's career," &c.

☞ A bill has been introduced in the Legislature of California requiring plaintiffs in libel suits against newspapers to give security for costs of court. The San Francisco "Chronicle" which successfully defended thirteen such suits, and has two more on hand, warmly advocates the passage of the bill, as if it should become a law it would effectually prevent many suits brought maliciously for the sake of annoyance, or in the vain hope of extracting money from publishers in the way of compromise.

—The obituary notice of Deputy Sheriff, Ansel Wright of Northampton, Mass., is the most statistical piece of grief which we remember to have met with. He was a deputy 30 years, made 4,128 arrests, and served 5,931 writs of attachment, representing a total amount of $2,213,476. He is declared to have been an excellent and honest public servant; but whether those who had the misfortune to be the subjects of his official attention, and who survive him, were found among the mourners, is more than we can determine. We ought to add that Mr. Wright was also Treasurer of the town of Northampton for 22 years, collecting and disbursing $1,148,580 without helping himself to a single public dollar!

LEISURE MOMENTS WITH GOOD AUTHORS

No. 2.—BY G. L. R.

Schlegel, a German writer, in his "Lectures on Dramatic Literature," says "The Merchant of Venice" is one of Shakespeare's most perfect works; and, in this opinion, all other critics seem to concur. Prof. Ulrici, of the University at Halle in Germany, regards the whole drama as a manifold working-out of the principle that all forms of right and justice, if carried beyond a certain point, pass over into their opposites, so that extreme right becomes extreme wrong, and thus verifies the old maxim that summum jus, summa injuria. This principle is quite fully illustrated in the character of Shylock, and also in that of his daughter Jessica.

The play is, indeed, worthy the careful study of any one who wishes to learn with what interest genius can invest any subject with which it deals. In "The Merchant of Venice" are found many of Shakespeare's most beautiful expressions, and not a few of the most pointed maxims—quite a number of those aphorisms which are so frequently heard in daily conversation, and so often quoted in public addresses and newspaper articles. In Act I, Scene1, we find this sentence: "Nature hath framed strange fellows in her time:" and then also:

"Some that will evermore peep through their eyes
And laugh like parrots at a bagpiper,
And when I ope my lips let no dog bark."

These words are used by Gratiano when speaking of a certain class of people, quite as common now as when Shakespeare lived, who wish to —"Be dressed in an opinion

Of wisdom, gravity and profound conceit."
And "reputed wise for saying nothing."

Bassanio says of Gratiano that "his reasons are two grains of wheat hid in two bushels of chaff." Gratianos are not hard to find even in these days of free pronouns and free schools.

Nerissa says to Portia: "They are sick that surfeit with too much, as they that starve with nothing. It is no mean happiness, therefore, to be seated in the mean: superfluity comes sooner by white hairs, but competency lives longer."

Portia says: "If to do were as easy as to know what were good to do, chapels had been churches, and poor men's cottages prince's palaces. It is a good divine that follows his own instructions; I can easier teach twenty what were good to be done, than to be one of twenty to follow mine own teaching."

Antonio says—

—"Mark you this, Bassanio,
The devil can cite Scripture for his purpose.
An evil soul, producing holy witness,
Is like a villian with a smiling cheek;
A goodly apple rotten at the heart.
O, what a goodly outside falsehood hath!"

Launcelot says to old Gobbo, his father, that "it is a wise father that knows his own child." Perhaps no passage in Shakespeare is more frequently quoted than this one. In the same speech Launcelot says, "truth will come to light; murder can not long be hid; a man's son may, but in the end, truth will out."—The expression, that "murder will out," is often attributed to Daniel Webster. Does some one using it in one of his most celebrated forensic efforts; but he, undoubtedly, found it in Shakespeare, and used it as a quotation, not as an original thought.

Gratiano says: "All things that are, are with more spirit chas'd than enjoy'd." From this passage, I presume, arose that formidable question of debating societies: "Is there more pleasure in the pursuit than in the possession of an object?"

Jessica says:

"But love is blind, and overs cannot see
The pretty follies that themselves commit."

And, again, she says "What, must I hold a candle to my shames?" Morroco says: "All that glitters is not gold." This is one of the most oft-speated passages in Shakespeare, and few that use it know its origin.

Arragon says—

—"who shall go about
To cozen fortune and be honorable
Without the stamp of merit? Let none presume
To wear an undeserved dignity.
O, that estates, degrees and offices
Were not derived corruptly, and that clear honor
Were purchased by the merit of the wearer!
How many should then cover that stand bare!
How many be commanded that command!
How much low pleasantry would then be gleaned
From the true seed of honour; and how much honor
Picked from the chaff and ruin of the times,
To be new varnished."

To read these lines, one would think they were written in the present century and in our own land, so accurately do they describe our present social and political status of this country.

Nerissa says: "Hanging and wiving goes by destiny." Young men need not, however, be afraid to choose wives because Nerissa made such a seemingly ocasular assertion.

Bassanio says, "Tne world is still deceived by ornament." This is quite as true now as it could possibly have been in Shakespeare's day. And he says also:

—"Look on beauty,
And you shall see 'tis purchased by the weight;
Which therein works a miracle in nature,
Making them lightest that wear most of it;
So are those crisped snaky golden locks,
Which make such wanton gambols with the wind,
Upon supposed fairness, often known
To be the dowry of a second head;
The skull that bred them, in the sepulchre."

In this passage we are plainly taught that paint, and powder, and false hair, are not feminine inventions of the present century. No, indeed; not a bit of it. And we learn further that poor human nature is no worse, and—may I not say—no better to-day than it was in Shakespeare's times; or, for that matter, "In the good old days of Adam and Eve."

ACTS PASSED The Legislature, and gone to the Governor, in which citizens of Beaver county are interested

An act to authorize the State Treasurer to refund certain collateral inheritance tax to the executor of the estate of John Shiveley, deceased.

WHEREAS, S. B. Wilson, executor of the last will and testament of John Shively, late of the borough of Beaver in the county of Beaver, deceased, did on the sixth day of August, A. D. 1870, pay over to the Register of wills, &c., for the said county of Beaver, the sum of two hundred and forty-two dollars and seventy-five cents as collateral inheritance tax upon said decedent's estate, under the belief that said estate was liable to said tax: And Whereas, The said estate, except the sum of two thousand dollars thereof, was not liable to the payment of said tax, Therefore SECTION 1. Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania in General Assembly met, and it is hereby enacted by the authority of the same, That the State Treasurer is hereby authorized and directed to refund to S. B. Wilson, executor of the last will and testament of John Shiveley, late of the borough of Beaver in the county of Beaver, deceased, the sum of one hundred and forty-two dollars and seventy-four cents erroneously paid by him as collateral inheritance tax upon said decedent's estate; Provided, however, That before said money is paid by the State Treasurer the said S. B. Wilson shall produce satisfactory evidence to the Auditor General that the said sum was erroneously paid, and that the said collateral inheritance tax was not due to the Commonwealth.

An act relative to the Beaver and Mercer State Road, Beaver county.

SEC. 1. Be it enacted, &c., That an act entitled "An Act relative to the Beaver and Mercer State road in the county of Beaver," approved the 9th day of April, A. D. 1870, be and the same is hereby repealed.

SEC. 2. That that portion of the Beaver and Mercer road lying between the Beaver river and the barn of Evan P. Townsend, be and the same is hereby vacated, except so much of the same as the town council of the borough of New Brighton shall ordain and establish as a street, not to exceed in no case fifty feet.

SEC. 3. That the aforesaid town council, within a reasonable time after the passage of this act, establish, ordain and locate the said street, and shall have full power to open up and control the same.

An act to extend to Beaver county the provisions of an act entitled "An Act to change the mode of criminal proceedings in Erie and Union counties," approved May 1st, 1861.

SEC. 1. Be it enacted, &c., That the provisions of an act entitled "An Act to change the mode of criminal proceedings in Erie and Union counties," approved the first day of May, A. D. 1861, be and the same are hereby extended to the county of Beaver.

SEC. 2. That in addition to the fees allowed to justices of the peace in section tenth of the act aforesaid, said justices are hereby authorized to charge and collect fifty cents in all cases which shall be tried by a jury under the provisions of the said act.

An act relative to the sale of Unseated Lands for taxes in the county of Beaver.

SEC. 1. Be it enacted, &c., That, hereafter, the fees to be received by the county treasurer for advertising sale of each tract or lot of ground for taxes shall be one dollar. Provided, That this act shall only apply to the county of Beaver.

An act making the borough of Glasgow in the county of Beaver, and certain adjacent farms, a separate election district.

SEC. 1. Be it enacted, &c., That the borough of Glasgow in the county of Beaver, and the farms of Benjamin Dawson, James Little, Benona R. Dawson, Wm. L. Rayl, D. C. Thompson, Jessie Smith's ferry farm and ferry property, and the Minsinger farm, and all included within the said lines, shall hereafter constitute a separate election district for all elections except for township officers, which shall not be affected by this act.

SEC. 2. The first election shall be held in the public school-house in the borough of Glasgow aforesaid, on the second Tuesday of October, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and seventy-two, by election officers elected by the legal voters present at the time fixed by law for the opening of the polls; and the place for holding future elections shall be determined by ballot of the qualified voters of said district at said election.

An act conferring additional powers upon the Burgess and Town Council of Rochester, in the county of Beaver.

SEC. 1. Be it enacted, &c., That in case of a vacancy occurring by death, resignation, or otherwise, in the office of burgess, in the borough of Rochester, Beaver county, the council shall elect one of their number to discharge the duties thereof until the next annual borough election; and, in case of a vacancy occurring by death, resignation, or otherwise, in the council of said borough, the remaining members of council shall elect a qualified elector of said borough to fill such vacancy until the next annual borough election.

SEC. 2. That in addition to the powers and authority given to the burgess and town council of the borough of Rochester by special and general laws now existing they shall have, and are hereby invested with authority to enact and ordain, laws rules and regulations for the government of said borough and the conduct of citizens and sojourners, and impose penalties for violation thereof; to elect and appoint a chief of police for said borough to hold his office at the will and pleasure of council, and to fix his salary and compensation he shall from time to time receive; to fix and enact a bill of fees and charges to be paid for all services made and services of such chief of police and subordinates, and to ordain when and by whom the same shall be paid; to enforce the payment of all fines which may be imposed by the burgess and the council against any one violating the laws and ordinances of said borough; the said council shall have power to authorize, by ordinance, the burgess to enforce the laws and regulations to preserve the peace and order of said borough, and to sentence—if he shall see fit—the person violating the same to imprisonment in the jail of the county for a period not exceeding thirty days, upon such terms to release from imprisonment as the ordinance giving authority to sentence may prescribe. No subordinate policeman shall be appointed without the approbation of the council.

SEC. 3. That the burgess, chief of police and subordinate policemen appointed and approved as prescribed by this act, shall, in all proceedings in the courts of this Commonwealth, be considered and held to be public officers; and arrests may be made by such chief of police and subordinate policemen for offences against the laws and ordinances of the said borough—to preserve the peace and good order thereof—without complaint or warrant; such burgess, chief of police and subordinates being liable, as other executive officers of this Commonwealth, for any abuse of power granted in this act.

SEC. 4. The burgess and town council aforesaid shall hereafter annually in the month of May, beginning with the year one thousand eight hundred and seventy-three publish, or cause to be published in at least two newspapers published in the county, for three successive weeks and by posting the same at a prominent point in the borough, a full and complete statement and exhibit of the amount of borough taxes assessed together with the amounts of all fines, penalties and forfeitures imposed and collected, with a detailed statement of all the expenditures up to the first day of May in each year; and in case of failure to publish, as aforesaid, the said burgess and members of town council shall each be liable to pay a fine of fifty dollars, to be recovered before any justice of the peace of the proper county, at the suit of any citizen of said borough, as like sums are now recovered by existing laws; and such amounts to go to the use of said borough.

SEC. 5. That the said burgess and town council shall have power to levy and collect annually, for borough purposes, any tax not exceeding ten mills on the dollar on the valuation assessed for county purposes, as now is or may be provided by law. All property, offices, professions and persons made taxable by the laws of this Commonwealth for county rates and levies shall be taxable in the same manner for borough purposes.

SEC. 6. To borrow money for the use of the borough, not exceeding in the whole, one dollar on every dollar of valuation of the assessed value of the real and personal estate in the borough as assessed for county purposes, and to issue certificates therefor bearing interest not exceeding eight per centum per annum: Provided, That the same shall not be disposed of at less than par value; And provided further, That such loan shall be subject only to the payment of State taxes.

An act to incorporate the Beaver College and Musical Institute.

WHEREAS, The stockholders, friends, and patrons of the Beaver Seminary and Institute, purpose the erection of large additional buildings and desire to elevate the grade of the institution to that of a first class college, therefore:

SEC. 1. Be it enacted, &c., That the corporate name of the Beaver Seminary and Institute is and is hereby changed to Beaver College and Musical Institute and the same is hereby erected and established, at the town of Beaver in Beaver county in this Commonwealth, a college for the education of persons of both sexes in all the branches of learning usually taught in the colleges and seminaries of the United States, and also in such other of the fine arts as may be authorized by the board of trustees.

SEC. 2. The name, style and title of the institution and constitution thereof shall be as follows:

Article 1. The said institution shall be hereafter and forever called and known by the name and style of Beaver College and Musical Institute; to that name it shall have perpetual succession and shall have the right to adopt and use a common seal and the same to change at pleasure; shall be capable of suing and being sued; of purchasing and taking by gift, grant, devise or otherwise for the use of the said college all manner of real and personal estate and of holding, managing and disposing of the same in like manner as any other body politic under the laws of this Commonwealth.

Article 2. The present property of the Beaver Seminary and Institute and all moneys that may be raised for the purchase of additional ground, the erection of new buildings or the purchase of apparatus, et cetera, for the institution, shall for the purposes of this incorporation be considered in the light of capital stock and be divided into shares; each share representing ten dollars of the money actually contributed for the purposes stated.

Article 3. Each stockholder of the Beaver Seminary and Institute shall be entitled to as many shares in the Beaver College and Musical Institute as he holds shares in the Beaver Seminary and Institute, and each new contribution shall entitle the contributor to one share for every ten dollars contributed.

Article 4. The register shall be kept containing the names of all shareholders with the number of shares held by each and no share shall be transferred except on said register by the shareholder in person, or, in case of his decease, by his legal representative in the presence of and attested by the secretary of the board of trustees.

Article 5. The shares shall be considered personal property and shall pass to the heirs-at-law, by will or descent, as other personal property, and by assignment pursuant to the fourth article of this charter.

Article 6. Each shareholder shall be a corporator under this charter, and shall be entitled to a voice and vote in all meetings of the corporation.

Article 7. The said College and Musical Institute shall be under the management, direction and government of a board of trustees to be elected and constituted as hereinafter directed; subject, however, to such by-laws, rules and regulations as may be prescribed by the corporators.

SELECT MISCELLANY.

JASON CREEL.

AN INCIDENT IN PENNSYLVANIA.

The mists of the morning still hung heavily on the mountain-top above the vilage of Redcliff, but the roads which led toward it were crowded with the varied population of the surrounding population from far and near. In Aylesbury the shops were closed; the hammer of the blacksmith lay upon its anvil; not a wagon of any description was to be seen in the street; and even the bar of the tavern was locked and the key gone with its proprietor toward the cliff, as a token of an important era which was without a parallel in the place. And—save here and there a solitary head looking through a broken pane in some closed up house, with an air of disappointment, or the cries of a little nursling were heard, betokening that in the general flight it had been left in unskilful hands; or may hap, here and there a solitary, ragged and ill-natured school-boy was seen, or a not less solitary and ill-natured dog, either seeming but half appeased by the privilege of a holiday granted on condition of staying at home—the whole village exhibited a picture of desertion and silence which had been unknown before.

But, in proportion as you drew nearer the ponderous cliffs, in the midst of which the little town of Redcliff was situated, you mingled again in the thick bustle and motion of the world of men and women, boys and horses and dogs, and all living, moving and creeping things that inhabit the wild districts of Pennsylvania.

The village was crowded to overflowing long before the sun had gained a sufficient altitude to throw its rays upon the deep valley in which it lay. There the bar of an inn was crowded, and the fumes of tobacco and whisky, the gingling of small change and the perpetual clamor of the throng, were sufficient to rack a brain of common flexibility. In the street there was a greeting of old and long parted acquaintances; the bartering of horses; the settling of old accounts; the buffoonery of half intoxicated men; the clatter of women; the crying and hallooing of children and boys, and the barking and quarrelling of stranger dogs.

To look upon the scene, to mingle with the crowd, to listen to the conversation, or to survey the countenances of the assembled multitued, led to no satisfactory solution of the cause for which this mass of heterogeneous matter was congregated.

Within the walls of the old stone jail at the foot of the mountain, a different scene had been that morning witnessed. There, chained to a stake in the miserable dungeon, damp, scarcely illuminated by a ray of light, now lay the emaciated form of one whose final doom seemed near at hand. A few hours before, his wife and little daughter had traveled a hundred miles to meet him once more on the threshold of the grave. They met, and from that gloomy vault the hymn ascended with the ascending sun; and the jailor, as he listened to the melodious voices of the three persons whom he looked upon as the most desolate and lost of all in the wide world, almost doubted the evidence of his senses, and stood in fixed astonishment at the massive door. Could these be the voices of a murderer, and a murderer's wife and child?

This brief, and to be final interview, had passed, however; those unfortunate ones had loudly commended themselves to the keeping of their heavenly parent, and parted; he to face the assembled multitude on the scaffold, and they, as they said, to return by weary journeys to their sorrowful home. The convict, worn out with sickness and watching, now slept soundly.

His name was Jason Creel; his place of residence said to be in Virginia. He had been taken up while traveling from the northward to his home, and tried and convicted at a country town some miles distant, for the murder of a traveler, who had borne him company from the Lakes, and was ascertained to have a large sum of money with him, and who was found in the room in which they both slept at a country inn, near Redcliff, with his throat cut.

Creel had always protested his innocence, declaring that the deed was perpetrated by some one while he was asleep; but the circumstances were against him; and although the money was not found on him, he was sentenced to be hanged, and had been removed to the old stone jail at Redcliff for security, the county jail being deemed unsafe. This was the day the execution was to take place; the scaffold was already erected; the crowd pressed round the building, and frequent cries of "Bring out the murderer," were heard.

The sun at last told the hour of 11, and there could be no more delay; the convict's cell was entered by the officers in attendance, who aroused him with the information that everything was ready for him without, and bade him hasten to his execution; they laid hands upon him, and pinioned him tight, while he looked up toward heaven in wild astonishment, as one new-born, and only said: "The dream—the dream!"

"What dream, Mr. Jason?" asked the sheriff. "You would do me a great kindness, if you would dream yourself and me out of this disagreeable business."

"I dreamed," replied the convict, "that while you read the death warrant to me on the scaffold, a man came through the crowd and stood before us, in a gray dress, with white hat, and large whiskers, and that a bird fluttered over him, and sang distinctly: "This is Lewis, the murderer of the traveler."

The officers and jailor held a short consultation, which ended in the determination to look sharply after the man in grey with white hat; accompanied with many hints of the resignation of the prisoner, and the possibility of his innocence being asserted by a supernatural agency. The prison doors were cleared, and Creel, pale and feeble, with a hymn-book in his hand, and a mien all meekness and humility, was seen tottering from the prison to the scaffold. He had no sooner ascended it, than his eyes began to wander over the vast concourse of people around him with a scrutiny that seemed like faith in dreams; and while the sheriff read the warrant, the convict's anxiety appeared to increase; he looked, and looked again; then raised his hands and eyes a moment to the clear sky, as if breathing a last ejaculation, when, lo! as he resumed his first position, the very person he described stood within six feet of the ladder!

The prisoner's eye caught the sight, and flashed with fire, while he called out: "There is Lewis the murderer of the traveler!" and the jailer at the same moment seized the stranger by the collar. At first he attempted to escape; but being secured, and taken before the magistrates, he confessed the deed, detailed all the particulars, delivered up part of the money, informed where another part was hidden, and was fully committed for trial—while Creel was set at liberty, and hastened, like a man out of his senses, from the scaffold.

Three days had elapsed, Creel had vanished immediately after his liberation, when the pretended Lewis astonished and confounded the magistrates by declaring Creel to be her husband; that she had concealed the disguise, and performed the whole part by his direction; that he had given her money; which he had successfully concealed; and that the whole from the prison to the scaffold scene, was a contrivance to effect his escape, which having been effected, she was regardless of the consequences. Nothing could be done with her—she was set at liberty, and neither she nor her husband was heard of again.

Marriage.

At the present time, when the marriage relation occupies so much of the public attention, the following views of the late Theodore Parker on this subject are not without interest:

Men and women, and especially young people, do not know that it takes years to marry completely two hearts, even of the most loving and well assorted. But nature allows no sudden change. We slope very gradually from the cradle to the summit of life. Marriage is gradual, a fraction of us at a time. A happy wedlock is a long falling in love. I know young persons think love belongs only to the brown hair, and plump, round, crimson, cheeks. So it does for its beginning, just as Mt. Washington begins at Boston Bay. But the golden marriage is a part of love which the bridal day knows nothing of. Youth is the tassel and silken flower of love, age is the full corn, ripe and solid in the ear. Beautiful is the morning of love, with its prophetic crimson, violet, purple and gold, with its hopes of days that are to come. Beautiful also is the evening of love, with its glad remembrances, and its rainbow side turned toward heaven as well as earth. Young people marry their opposite in temper and general character, and such a marriage is commonly a good match. They do it instinctively. The young man does not say, "My black eyes require to be wed with blue, and my over-vehemence requires to be a little modified with somewhat of dullness and reserve." When these opposites come together to be wed they do not know it; each thinks the other just like itself.

Old people never marry their opposites; they marry their similars, and from calculation. Each of these two arrangements is very proper. In their long journey, these two young opposites will fall out by the way a great many times, and both get out of the road; but each will charm the other back again, and by-and-by they will be agreed as to the place they will go to and the road they will go by, and become reconciled. The man will be nobler and larger for being associated with so much humanity unlike himself and she will be a nobler woman for having manhood beside her that seeks to correct her deficiencies and supply her with what she lacks. if the diversity be not too great, and their be real piety and love in their hearts to begin with. The old bridegroom, having a much shorter journey to make, must associate himself with one like himself. A perfect and complete marriage is perhaps as rare as perfect personal beauty. Men and women are married fractionally; now a small fraction, then a large fraction. Very few are married totally, and they only, I think, after some forty or fifty years of gradual approach and experiment. Such a large and sweet fruit is so complete that it needs a very long summer to ripen in, and then a long winter to mellow and season it. But a real, happy marriage of love and judgment between a noble man and woman, is one of the things so very rare that if the sun were, as the Greek poets fabled, a god he might stop the world in order to feast his eyes on such a spectacle.

☞ England will soon have all she can do to manage India in the East without getting up a quarrel with America in the West. The recent assassination of Earl Mayo, Governor General of India, and the similar fate met by the Lord Chief Justice of that country last September, has had the effect of calling the attention of the public to the existence of a gigantic conspiracy of Mohammedans extending throughout India, the object of which is to expel Europeans from that country. There is an amazing degree of intensity in the hatred of the natives for the foreing infidels and this revival of Mohammedanism will increase it. There is yet danger that the English, with what Christianity they have taken with them to their Eastern possessions, will be driven out before the overwhelming masses of infidels by whom they are surrounded. When we contemplate the millions in Asia who have as yet no idea of what we term modern civilization, to say nothing of Christianity, we can be content with the fields for conquest that are yet before us and not sigh for other worlds than this to conquer.

RE-ANIMATING THE HAIR.—When the hair ceases to draw from the scalp the natural lubricant which is its sustenance, its vitality is, as it were suspended, and if not promptly attended to, baldness will be the certain result. The one sure méthod of avoiding such an unpleasant catastrophe is to use Lyon's Kathairon, which, when rubbed into the scalp, will speedily re-animate the hair and prevent it from falling out. Besides that, this inimitable resuscitant and strengthener of the hair nourishes and stimulates its young and tender fibers, removes all obstacles to their growth in the shape of dandruff and dirt and ultimately produces a new crop of hair, stronger, glossier, and twice as abundant as the old. As a hair dressing it is notably the most agreeable refreshing and serviceable article ever placed upon a dressing table

PURGATIVE PILLS have become a settled necessity with the American people. Indeed, cathartics always have been and always must be used, in some form, by all mankind. in this country the pilular form of administration has been growing in favor since pills were first made of Aloes and Rhubarb, rolled into a ball. Their high position in the public confidence has finally been secured and fastened into permanency by Ayers Cathartic Pills, the most skillful combination of medicine for the diseases they are intended to cure, that science can devise or art produce. Those who need pills, no longer hesitate what pills to take if they can get Ayers Pill.—Wheeling (Va.) Pres.

Manhood: How Lost, How Restored

Just published, a new edition of Dr. Culverwell's Celebrated Essay on the radical cure (without medicine) of Spermatorrhœa or Seminal Weakness, Involuntary Seminal Losses, IMPOTENCY, Mental and Physical incapacity, impediments to Marriage, etc.; also, CONSUMPTION, EPILEPSY, and FITS, induced by self-indulgence or sexual extravagance. Price, in a sealed envelope, only 6 cents.

The celebrated author, in this admirable essay, clearly demonstrates from a thirty years' successful practice, that the alarming consequences of Self Abuse may be radically cured without the dangerous use of internal medicine or the application of the knife; pointing out a mode of cure at once simple, certain, and effectual, by means of which every sufferer, no matter what his condition may be, may cure himself cheaply, privately, and radically.

☞ This Lecture should be in the hands of every youth and every man in the land.

Sent, under seal, in a plain envelope, to any address, postpaid on receipt of six cents or two post stamps.

Also, Dr. Culverwell's "Marriage Guide," price 25 cents.

The Improved Grand Oroide

GOLD WATCHES.

We have recently brought our Oroide Gold Metal to such perfection that it is difficult for the best judges to distinguish it from gold. The $9 watches are with patent escapement movements; in appearance, and for time, equaling a gold one costing $100. The $12 are full jewelled patent levers; equal to $150 gold watches. The $15 are the same as the last, but of a finer finish; equal to one costing $175. And the $18 watches are of a fine finish will full jewelled American movements, equaling gold ones worth $200. They are all in hunting cases; gentlemen and Ladies' sizes; and warranted genuine and wear, by special certificates.

Also, elegant designs of Gent's and Ladies' Chains, from $1 to $4; and Jewelry of all kinds.

Goods sent C. O. D. Customers permitted to examine the goods they order, before paying bill, on payment of express charges. When six watches are ordered at one time, we will send an extra watch of the same kind free. For further particulars send for circular. Address—
